

Name the one thing that all jobs have in common.

Communication.

Whether you work in business, healthcare, government or any other field, you need to convey information to others. In fact, the word “communication” itself comes from that very idea of finding things that are “in common.”

Roosevelt’s Business and Media Communications is the career pathway designed to get you ready for the world of work. Verbal, written and visual communication are essential in today’s media-saturated society. Whether you want to start up your own company or work for a Fortune 500 corporation, we can offer you the tools you’ll need.

Enter these doors...

...and find your career pathway to success.

Where else can you find business classes that draw from diverse subjects such as marketing, media studies, language arts, visual science, all combined with technology?

Our philosophy is that we must prepare our students not only for traditional jobs in business, but also for jobs that don't yet exist. We are living during a revolution in communications that offers multiple challenges as well as opportunities. Our students will have both the technical and communication skills to succeed in this dynamic environment.

Put your future to work at the Business and Media Communications Pathway.
