Housing

Each tribal group lived in a home that suited their own needs, depending upon the geography of the land and the tribe's basic needs. Your job is to create a 3-D model of the specific type of dwelling your tribe actually lived in. This house should have details (decorations, tribal markings, figurines of animals and people—drawn ones are fine—grasses or other natural objects) that would make it clear where the tribe was geographically located and why they would have chosen that type of housing unit.

For example, the Haiada houses were rectangular long houses made out of wood planks. They had pitched roof because they lived in the forest where it rained a lot. They had a totem pole in front of their house. All of these details, including trees around it to show the forest, would be appropriate to have when building my 3-D model home.
